
Tudur College

In a land full of educational establishments, one stands out above the rest. Located between Éamonn and Praibhir lies the Tudur College's campus/village. Prestigious, comprehensive and qualified. A place for learning the most important aspects of Methríaine society. The school prepares citizens to meet the country's constant need to innovate and grow.

It is divided into six wings, each with its own specializations: Science, agronomy, magic, law, art and engineering. Each wing has its own sector within campus, prepared for the vicissitudes of its fields. They are all connected to the central sector, where the main building and a small varied market are located. Being a place dedicated to learning, violence is clearly prohibited. This goes beyond its scale, what matters is abandoning barbaric attitudes.

Each career has its own citizenship requirements. Its costs, variables of course, depending on the degree of knowledge taught. It is up to each master to define how long they last, and how much they cost, but it is recommended that it be a matter of years. Remember that for Mhetríaine's citizens education is under scholarship (to a lesser or greater degree) but not for foreigners. In fact, their cost should increase. Completing a career confers benefits for a character, always at the master's discretion, but in line with the achievement: XP, access to notes with requirements, fame, faction hierarchy, permanent bonuses, etc.

All students have faction hierarchy 1, but in order to advance in position they must become collegiate members. Ranks between 3 and 4 within the faction are administrative staff, assistants, cleaning personnel, etc. Meaning, the people who do the hard work. From hierarchy 5 onwards, only members of the collegiate body are accepted, that is, professors and career directors. It is the high-ranking members who have a little more work outside of teaching at school. Occasionally they are required to undertake some type of mission for the school's benefit (or the country's). Field investigations, foreign school's collaborations, diplomatic or commercial missions, espionage... The professor job opens doors that other fields do not. The high ranked take advantage of their subordinates to raise the prestige of the school.

Each wing has a director, head of all material and themorque resources within the wing. Additionally, the college has a senior dean. Normally these positions are for life, although they must be revalidated by the central senate every 5 years.
